CIA Analyst Dies Here

A Central Intelligence Agency analyst who had been a bridegroom for about four months dropped dead from an apparent heart attack while riding a horse at the Piney Creek Stable Sunday evening.

According to Charles Ackerman, owner of the stable, William Gould, 38, 7376 Lee Hwy., was riding a horse, Gallant Skipper, in front of the show ring when "he just rolled off and fell to the ground."

Ackerman summoned the

Burke Rescue Squad which gave artificial resuscitation enroute to Fairfax Hospital; however, hospital authorities said Gould was dead on arrival.

CIA officials said Gould had been employed since 1948 and was originally from the District.

Gould, according to Ackerman, boarded a horse at the stable which is located at 9225 Braddock Rd.

Surviving is his wife, Mara K. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Md.
